To Whom It May Concern,

Claire Stenger was a highly valued part of the Baboon team for an internship recently, and then moved up to be employed by us for a period afterward. I'm pleased to report she was an excellent choice, and a joy to work with, throughout both periods.

For one thing, Claire's creative skills were truly unique. When asked to imagine details of some of our cartoon worlds, to bring new vision and greater dimension to some animated series we were working on, she showed a really strong ability to add compelling details that enriched the project. She also had a natural understanding of character, what drives a character and what makes this character compelling to an audience.

Moreover, Claire helped us write song lyrics based on only a song title and some sketched out ideas. What resulted showed amazing artfulness, as well as being poignant and inspiring. It was accepted by the client (a producer of major renown) with gratitude and appreciation. We were all very impressed.

As a good sport, and a person you count on to be in your corner, Claire was always reliable. In addition, she was a pleasure to have in the workplace, with an attitude that made the workday better and adds to the positive energy around the office.

Finally her sense of humor particularly brightened the day for us around the office.

For all of the above reasons and more, I recommend her highly for any creative environment!
